ENDOWED CHAIR IN AGRICULTURAL YOUTH LEADERSHIP

MEMORIES OF CLEM McSPADDEN MAY INCLUDE HIS ROBUST VOICE ANNOUNCING A PROFESSIONAL RODEO OR HIS TIME AS A FORMER STATE AND FEDERAL LAWMAKER. NO MATTER THE "ARENA" IN WHICH HE IS REMEMBERED, CLEM McSPADDEN WAS A WONDERFUL LEADER AND A GREAT HISTORIAN.

The great nephew of Will Rogers, McSpadden was born and resided in the Chelsea, Oklahoma, area. He received his bachelor's degree in animal husbandry from Oklahoma State University in 1948.

McSpadden was a true Cowboy. He loved roping, particularly steer roping, and had a special fondness for the old ropers like Everett Shaw, Fred Lowery, Ike Rude and Dick Truitt. As a roper, he knew the McEntire family and helped famous country singer Reba McEntire get her start by singing the National Anthem at the National Finals Rodeo.

McEntire was just one of many young people McSpadden encouraged throughout his lifetime. He and his wife, Donna, endowed a scholarship in the Animal Science Department at OSU to assist students with similar interests and show their dedication to tomorrow's youth.

In July 2008, Oklahoma lost one of its great sons when McSpadden died of cancer at 82. His patriotism and spiritual side are best remembered in two pieces he wrote titled, "If This Flag Could Talk," and "The Cowboy's Prayer."

The Clem McSpadden Chair in Agricultural Youth Leadership will endow a program within the Animal Science Department to provide a select group of students with leadership and international experience involving state and national government and the agriculture industry.

By making a gift to the McSpadden Chair you can help ensure his legacy never dies and his impact is felt by future industry leaders for years to come.

Farm Bureau honors two with Distinguished Service awards

Oklahoma Farm Bureau honored two leaders during its 67th annual meeting in Oklahoma City with Distinguished Service Awards.

The pair of awards is designed to honor those who have made outstanding contributions to agriculture and to Oklahoma Farm Bureau, according to Matt Wilson, executive director.

Payne County's Dr. Michael R. Dicks and Woodward County's Eldon Merklin were honored Nov. 14 during a special award's program in the Cox Convention Center.

Dicks was presented with the Distinguished Service to Oklahoma Agriculture Award while Merklin received the Distinguished Service to Oklahoma Farm Bureau Award.

Dicks, 55, of Stillwater, has served agriculture for more than 40 years as an educator and producer on the state, national and international levels.

He has served on the faculty of Oklahoma State University since 1989, and currently is a professor of agricultural economics. Before coming to OSU, he was employed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service.

Dicks was involved with fruit and vegetable production as well as sheep and cattle production in California from 1966 to 1971, and has continued to pursue his agricultural interests with wheat and cattle enterprises since relocating to Oklahoma.

After earning his undergraduate degree from California Polytechnic State University, he served three years in the Peace Corps in Kenya. He has served on the Southern Agricultural Economics Association and has been an advisor to an Oklahoma U.S. Senator and three of the state's U.S. House members.

During his career as an educator, he has been honored by Gamma Sigma Delta, the Southern Agricultural Economics Association and Oklahoma State's Aggie-X with its outstanding advisor award.

Dicks has made significant contributions to agriculture in Europe, Africa, the Middle East, the Caribbean, Mexico and Canada as well as in America where he has worked extensively in the Southern and Great Plains as well as Oklahoma and Payne County.

Internationally, he has conducted analysis for trade negotiations as well as development assistance and policy development. Nationally, Dicks has provided agriculture and natural resource policy analysis and development. Locally, he has worked to develop profit maximizing farming techniques, practices and price and cost determination.

He is widely recognized for his development of the Conservation Reserve Program and most of the rules and regulations for the first conservation title in the Food Security Act of 1985.

Congress and USDA called upon Dicks in 1981, 1985, 1990, 1995, 2002 and 2008 to analyze options for the development of federal farm legislation.

Dicks and his wife, Ellen, reside in Stillwater. He serves as chairman of the Payne County Farm Bureau FB Act Committee.

Merklin, 65, is a lifetime resident of Woodward County. He attended Oklahoma State University before returning to Woodward County to pursue a full time career in agriculture. He lives near Mutual where he grows wheat and alfalfa and runs stockers along with a cow-calf herd.

He has devoted more than 35 years of his life to Farm Bureau, where he has served his county, state and nation as a leader of the farm organization.

Merklin became active in Farm Bureau and was elected to the Woodward County board. He was elected to the OFB board of directors in 1975 as the district one director, where he represented members from the northwest part of the state.

During his tenure on the state board, he served as vice president for five consecutive terms from 1988 to 1993 as well as holding the same office from 1977 to 1985.

Merklin held the district director's office until being elected OFB president in 1993, becoming only the fifth person to hold that position since the farm organization was chartered in 1942.

Under Merklin's leadership, OFB grew and became financially stronger. Also, during his tenure as president a computer networking system was established to connect every county office with the OFB state headquarters office. In addition, a statewide advertising campaign for OFB was initiated.

Merklin was elected to the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation in 1995 and served through 1997, when he opted not to seek re-election to the OFB president's office.

In addition to his service to Farm Bureau, Merklin served on the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board. He was appointed to that board by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture in 1986, and then re-appointed to a three-year term in 1987.

Merklin was elected as the first chairman of the Oklahoma Beef Council in 1990, where he served a one-year term. He was re-elected chairman in 1991, and was named to a three-year term by Farm Bureau to represent it on the Beef Council.

Scott, 52, and Carol, 53, were married in 1978 and began their farming and ranching operation that same year on a school land lease, trading labor for the use of his father's farm equipment. They also rented more cropland and a small pasture, raising wheat and cattle and prairie hay.

Today's operation consists of 720 acres of owned land and another 3,000 plus acres of rented land. The last crop year saw them plant 1,000 acres of wheat and 400 acres of corn with another 60 acres in alfalfa and 350 acres of prairie hay. The 2,000 plus acres of pasture remaining is used for the 145-head cow herd.

"In the last few years we began feeding steers to sell as quarters of beef to friends and family. This has grown from just a couple of friends to a list of over 30 clients."

All production records for the operation are computerized, going back 30 years on wheat and corn. Scott also maintains a daily journal so time, weather, current events and production records can be compared when making marketing decisions.

"We want to produce the same amount of beef off fewer acres of pasture using improved grasses. We want to increase crop production using fewer hours on equipment and labor. And," they said, "we want to improve soil and water quality and see the results in increased crop production.

"Most of all, we want to be good stewards of the gifts God has bestowed on us. We have been fortunate to witness first-hand the miracles of His creation."

Scott served a district seven OFB director from 1996 until terming out in 2005. He has served many years on the Noble County board, and has held the president's position multiple times. Carol has served many times as chair of the county's FBW Committee.

He also has served on the county ASCS Committee, with multiple stints as the chairman.

Both he and Carol are members of the local Chamber of Commerce and Main Street organization as well as being politically active and Sunday school teachers and communion ministers. They also have served on the local Livestock Boosters Club.

"We really believe in what we do and treat our farm and ranch operation as a profession," they said. "The whole family shares this belief in the importance of what we do producing food for the world."

Scott said he grew up wanting to farm and married a farm girl that had the same dreams he had.

"We are very proud of the profession we have chosen."

Jack and Jodi Simmons win Achievement Award

Adair County's Jack and Jodi Simmons were named Oklahoma Farm Bureau YF&R Achievement Award winner Nov. 14th at the 67th annual convention in Oklahoma City.

The YF&R Achievement Award honors the state's top young farmer or farm family for their achievements in the farming business and their leadership in the agricultural community. A panel of judges selected the Stilwell couple for the award.

They received an expense-paid trip to the 2009 American Farm Bureau convention in San Antonio, Tex., to represent Oklahoma in the national contest where they will compete for Dodge pickups and Arctic Cat four-wheelers. As the Oklahoma winner, the Simmons received a year's use of a Dodge pickup and the use of a Kubota tractor along with other prizes.

Jack and Jodi have two children, Eryn, 14, and Spencer, 5.

They have more than 1,300 acres near Stilwell where they have 100 acres of hay and run 240 head of cattle in addition to operating a liquid feed business.

Both Jack and Jody grew up on farms. Their operation today includes parts of the farm where Jack was reared.

Their operation dates to 1989, when they rented pasture and purchased 60 head of cattle. They purchased their first 100 acres that same year; added another 669 acres in 1992; 500 acres in 1993; and purchased their last 100 acres two years ago.

"We have made several changes, expansion and improvements in both management and marketing practices for our cow-calf operation," they said.

Among the changes implemented are spraying pastures for weed control as opposed to mowing, improved genetics in the cattle herd and the use of video auctions for their animals to access more buyers.

In the future, the couple hopes to clear more timber to increase pasture opportunities for their animals as well as cross-fencing to better manage grazing. There also are plans to build a hay barn and facilities for backgrounding calves.

While their occupation occupies much of their time, both serve on their county's YF&R Committee. Jack also serves as the Adair County Farm Bureau vice president and Jodi serves as secretary of the county Women's Committee. They also both are members of the county's 4-H and FFA Boosters Club.

"We measure and evaluate the management of our family operation by debt to income ratio. As our income increases, it enables us to decrease or debt."

Scott Storey wins Excellence in Agriculture Award

Payne County's Scott Storey was recognized with Oklahoma Farm Bureau's YF&R Excellence in Agriculture Award Nov. 14 at the 67th annual convention in Oklahoma City.

The award recognizes successful young people 35 or younger who are involved in farming but whose primary occupations are not farming or owning an agricultural business. The award is based on their involvement in agriculture and participation in Oklahoma Farm Bureau and other community organizations.

Storey received a Polaris four-wheeler ATV courtesy of Farm Credit plus a trip to the AFBF convention in San Antonio, Tex., to represent Oklahoma in the national contest.

He and his wife, Amanda, and two children, Seth and Emily, reside in Stillwater.

After completing bachelor and master degree requirements at Oklahoma State University, he accepted a position with the USDA Agriculture Research Service as a biological science technician in the wheat, peanut and other field crop research unit. He currently is working to research varieties and germplasms of barley that are genetically superior.

"In my current job, I have many opportunities to have a positive impact on agriculture," Storey said. "I plan on continuing my involvement in youth organizations and with the production side of agriculture so I can continue to spread the good news our industry is doing."

While he's employed full time with USDA, he maintains a 20-head herd of cattle in McCurtain County on leased land. Family

He said he believes the most important issue facing agriculture is keeping it "in a positive light in front of the rest of the country." He also said if agriculture is to survive that "we need to make it more affordable and inviting for young people. . ."

Storey is active on the Payne County Farm Bureau YF&R Committee, and participates in many functions it holds. He also has been in the finals of the state YF&R Discussion Meet.

She received the use of a new Dodge pickup for a year as the 2008 Oklahoma winner.

Clark holds a bachelor degree from Oklahoma State University and master degree from Northwestern Oklahoma State University. She is the agriculture education instructor at Fairview Public Schools.
